Any or all of our forward-looking statements in this presentation may turn out to be inaccurate. Our actual results could differ materially from those contained in forward-looking statements due to a number of factors, including, among others: global macroeconomic conditions, including commodity prices, and economic, political and social conditions in the markets in which we operate, particularly in Peru; major changes in Peruvian government policies at the national, regional or municipal levels, including in connection with infrastructure concessions, investments in infrastructure and affordable housing subsidies; social conflicts in Peru that disrupt infrastructure projects, particularly in the mining sector; interest rate fluctuations, inflation and devaluation or appreciation of the nuevo sol in relation to the U.S. dollar (or other currencies in which we receive revenue); our ability to continue to grow our operations, both in Peru and internationally; the level of capital investments and financings available for infrastructure projects of the types that we perform, both in the private and public sectors; competition in our markets, both from local and international companies; our ability to complete acquisitions on favorable terms or at all and to integrate acquired businesses and manage them effectively post-acquisition; performance under contracts, where a failure to meet schedules, cost estimates or performance targets on a timely basis could result in reduced profit margins or losses and impact our reputation; developments, some of which may be beyond our control, that affect our reputation in our markets, including a deterioration in our safety record; industry-specific operational risks, such as operator errors, mechanical failures and other accidents; availability and costs of energy, raw materials, equipment and labor; our ability to obtain financing on favorable terms; our ability to attract and retain qualified personnel; our ability to enter into joint operations, and rules involved in operating under joint operation or similar arrangements; our exposure to potential liability claims and contract disputes, including as a result of environmental damage alleged to have been caused by our operations; our and our clients’ compliance with environmental, health and safety laws and regulations, and changes in government policies and regulations in the countries in which we operate; negotiations of claims with our clients of cost and schedule variances and change orders on major projects; volatility in global prices of oil and gas; the cyclical nature of some of our business segments; limitations on our ability to operate our concessions profitably, including changes in traffic patterns, and limitations on our ability to obtain new concessions; our ability to accurately estimate the costs of our projects; changes in real estate market prices, customer demand, preference and purchasing power, and financing availability and terms; our ability to obtain zoning and other license requirements for our real estate development; changes in tax laws; natural disasters, severe weather or other events that may adversely impact our business; and certain other factors disclosed in our registration statement on Form F-1 on file with the SEC.
